

April 24 will be a red-letter day in the history of Washington.

Hampden Success in Role of Romeo

Washington Shows Awakening Interest in Shakespearean Productions. Gossip and News of Theatrical and Motion Picture World.

That there has been a decided re-awakening of interest in Shakespearean productions in Washington was attested by a well-nigh capacity audience at Pol's Theater last night when Walter Hampden and associated players presented "Romeo and Juliet," the love-tragedy of the ages. The same enthusiastic reception was accorded it that was the lot of the "Hamlet" performance on the evening previous.

As "Romeo," Mr. Hampden presents a virile, manly figure and given evidence of a proper appreciation of the fine shadings of the lines. He is an ardent lover, yet being so, at no time oversteps the line into the boundaries of overacting, as is sometimes the case in less capable hands. The selection of Mabel Moore as Juliet, was a most happy one, she proving both sweet and attractive and the possessor of a voice well suited to her lines.

Every member of the supporting cast makes his or her part stand out with cameo-cut clearness. Particular commendation is due J. Harry Irving as Mercutio, Ernest Rowan as Friar Laurence, Elsie Herndon Kearns as Juliet's nurse and Le Roi Oprell in the comedy role of Peter.

"Macbeth" will be repeated tonight and at both performances on Saturday, while Charles Rann Kennedy's "The Servant in the House," the single departure from Shakespearean repertoire, is announced for tomorrow night, with Mr. Hampden in the role which he originated.

SHUBERT-BELASCO—"Buddies"

The Selwyns will present a merry musical play "Buddies" at the Shubert-Belasco Theater next week, opening Monday night, with the original New York cast headed by Donald Brian, Peggy Wood and Ralph Morgan. These three brilliant musical comedy stars will have the support of such excellent artists as Edouard Durand, Robert Middlemas, Bert Melville and James Kilpatrick.

The play was written by George V. Hobart and the music by B. C. Hilliam. There are a dozen musical numbers, each with a peculiar jingle that catches the popular fancy.

One of the best in the play is the one in which Julie sings "Please Learn to Love," to her exasperatingly bashful lover. The song is of the order which makes one unconsciously hum the tune, and the story its lyrics tell from the groundwork for a highly humorous situation.

POL'S—"Hello, Alexander."

Probably the largest singing and step-dancing chorus on tour this season is that which adds much to the speed and action of "Hello, Alexander," the big musical extravaganza coming to Pol's Theater for a week's engagement beginning next Sunday night. McIntyre and Heath, the famous comedians who are starred in this production, have always been surrounded by a fine cast of principal pals and a particularly effective dancing chorus.

The Messrs. Shubert have seen to it that in "Hello, Alexander," their support is of the best. A number of principal musicians are also carried with this large company.

LOEW'S COLUMBIA—"Lying Lips."

"Lying Lips," the mighty Thomas H. Ince drama of life and love, in which House Peters and Florence Vidor have the roles of chief prominence, supported by Joseph Kilgour, Margaret Livingston, Margaret Campbell and many others, is proving one of the most powerful presentations ever offered by Loew's Columbia Theater. It is a breathless, palpitating epic of a woman's losing fight against the primitive forces of existence and the call of her true mate. The extra added attractions make the program one of brilliant splendor.

WANTS HALF A CENTURY ON STAGE LIKE FATHER

To have lived and worked for half a century among the people of the charming world of the stage is the high aim of Miss Dolly Sweet, featured star of the Ed Lee Wrothe Show, this week's attraction at the Gayety Theater, whose father enjoys the distinction of being the world's oldest living actor.

He is O. Preston Sweet, of New York City, and occasionally he takes part in some Shakespearean work given by the dramatic societies of New York, just to keep his hand in the game that he has served well over half a century.

If Miss Sweet's father, so many, in fact, that it is hardly fair to the star to mention her name in the same breath with fifty years, and she does not entertain for a moment the opinion that men and women outlive their usefulness. The experience they obtain after long years of service more than offsets the lack of youth, in her case.

The Gayety star has been in burlesque three seasons. Prior to her first engagement on the Columbia circuit she tried her hand at musical comedy and was with a show traveling through the South and West under the direction of Elmer J. Morgan. Incidentally, Miss Sweet wants the show world to know that she belongs to a family of theatrically inclined folks, her father now closing on to ninety years with the same vigor and strength of a person grown old in honorable service. She longs eventually to belong to some Broadway success and to stay in the game until failing health compels her to abandon its turf.

NATIONAL—"Robin Hood."

For his revival of the Reginald DeKoven opera, "Robin Hood," Ralph Dunbar, the successful Chicago producer of the best in the operatic field, is receiving numerous complimentary letters from music lovers throughout the country. And he is bringing his first attraction to Washington starting Monday, April 18, for six days and ending making at the New National.

Reginald DeKoven was born in Middletown, Conn., April 3, 1859. He was educated in England and took his degree at Oxford in 1879. Meanwhile he studied the piano and after his graduation, went to Germany where he continued his piano course and in addition took up composition. He also studied singing with Vanucci in Italy and operatic composition with Delibes and Gounod.

The best of the DeKoven operas are "The Begum" (1887); "Don Quixote" (1889); "Robin Hood" (1889); "The Algerian" (1893); "Rob Roy" (1894); "Maid Marian" (1901); and "Happy Land" (1905).

METROPOLITAN—"Mamma's Affair."

Constance Talmadge is scoring the most decisive personal success of her career on the screen at Crandall's Metropolitan Theater this week in the stellar role of Eve Orrin in First National's camera version of Rachel Barton Butler's famous Harvard prize play, "Mamma's Affair," adapted to the films by John Emerson and Anita Loos. The delightful comedy com-
